The National Mango Board, Orlando, Fla., will reach out to mango suppliers and other industry members in June with the first of a series of Web seminars scheduled to be conducted this year, according to a news release.

The first of the seminars — on best handling practices — is scheduled for June 3.

The seminar, to be presented in conjunction with the Post Harvest Technology Research & Information Center at the University of California-Davis, is targeted at importers, wholesalers, brokers and the staffs at retail distribution centers.

Those planning to attend may register at www.mango.org/handling.

Another Web seminar, scheduled for June 8, will present an industry outreach virtual meeting focused on the Mango Board's research programs.

Four outreach Web meetings are scheduled for this year, according to the news release. Details of the June 8 meeting are available at the board's Website, www.mango.org.

There is no charge for the Web seminars.
